New York Daily Tribune

COMMENCEMENT AT GENESEE COLLEGE. Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune. Lima, June 21, 1860.

If one leave the Canandaigua and Niagara Falls railway at Honeoye Falls, and walk or drive thence one mile west and three miles south, he reaches the beautiful and secluded village of Lima; and if then he mount the hill which rises on the northern border of the town, and cast his eyes toward the shaded streets and cozy cottages of the village lying at his feet, and beyond the village, over the rich farm lands which stretch away in every direction to the horizon, over the wheat fields and barley fields, over the red clover fields, over the sunny pasture lots dotted with broad-branched elms, over the checked cornfields, and over the glorious woods of maple and oak, he will easily pardon the honest pride of these villagers, and confess to the charms of the Genesee Country.

This village, a gem among the thoroughfares of the Genesee Country, was selected in 1832 by the old Genesee Conference as the site of the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, the oldest but one of its kind in the State of New-York. This institution, through the generous patronage of its long and eventful history, has done good and noble work for Western New-York. There is scarcely a township in this whole region which numbers not among its population those who have been reared in Lima.

It has been eminently a school for the people, and if the high and important number of scholars, and the high and noble training culture, it has given the public all it has demanded. The time has not been ill-nov, even if now, when schools of the highest grade could live in Western New-York. But if the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary has not given the public much more than it has asked, it has never given to the West what it has demanded.

It was in 1849, when the Seminary was actually in the place by the old friends and patrons of the Seminary. A substantial, commodious building, in the Corinthian style, was erected on the site of the Seminary. The college building contains no dormitories, but is partitioned off into recitation room, chapel, museum, &c. The chapel, which contains a fine organ is a beautiful and spacious room, furnished with about eight hundred sittings. It is a costly piece of work, and is usually filled with students. The Seminary has been usually a place of great activity, and has developed the number of students for the past year in 1859, and of their number 50 are young ladies. Well educated and the public prints have been discussing pro and con, the ability of female to compose and deliver public addresses, and the propriety of admitting them to the higher and drier departments of Genesee College, in the ratio of 10 to 1. Certificates of their solid and beneficial studies, in the various departments of the Seminary, manufactured and sold by the publisher, at all Wholesale and Retail Variety Cakes, No. 71 Center street, New-York.

On Friday, June 15, 1860, competitors declared for a prize. The successful candidate was Mr. Wm. Mary Linn, of Andover, N. Y., who was elected Moderator. The exercises were held in the evening of the 15th, and were attended by a large number of the friends and patrons of the Seminary. The exercises were held in the evening of the 15th, and were attended by a large number of the friends and patrons of the Seminary.

On Wednesday morning, June 20, the oration before the Genesee Seminary was pronounced by Bishop Simpson, in the presence of an immense congregation assembled in the First Methodist Church. This effort, as might have been expected, was in every respect worthy of the learned and eloquent Bishop. His theme was the necessity of an education being given to the young men and women of this country. Without detracting from the dignity of the subject or of the occasion, the speaker gave, at the close, some most wholesome advice to the undergraduate students, in a very humorous and laughter-moving mood.

On the evening of the same day (Wednesday) the College societies, in the presence of Prof. Alverson, and by the well-famed Prof. Alverson, W. H. C. Hooper, esq., Prof. Alverson, reminding the young gentlemen who he addressed, that their Alma Mater, like the Spartan mother, was now or soon after to send them forth to battle with their shields—to return with them or on them, spoke to two questions: He told them, what cannot be too often told, that wealth, influence, social or political reputation, are not the noblest objects for which men labor, and that real success must be won by honest and earnest toil; and by it only. He closed with some affectionate and encouraging remarks to the students, and to the education in order to acquire their school and college education.

The speaker was not heard well throughout the whole of his excellent and instructive address, by reason of the incessant and vigorous whistling kept up by the youthful occupants of the corner of the Seminary building, who were not only not to be rebuked, but under the open sky, where they would certainly be heard, and under the open sky, where they would certainly be heard, and under the open sky, where they would certainly be heard.
